INTRODUCTION
The Modern Slavery Act 2015 (‘the MSA’ or ‘the Act’) requires UK companies to promote ethical business practices and policies that protect workers from being abused and exploited in their own organisations and global supply chains. The Act specifically requires all businesses with annual revenues of over £36 million to publish a transparency statement setting out the steps they have taken to ensure there is no modern slavery in their own business and their supply chains.

In October 2017, the Home Office published updated guidance ‘Transparency in Supply Chains etc., A Practical Guide’ (‘the Guidance’), under Section 54(9) of the Act, which provides further clarification of how companies are expected to comply with the Act, and reaffirms the importance of an effective response from UK business to the threats and risks posed by modern slavery.

William Hill, which is the Group’s qualifying entity for these purposes, published its first transparency statement to comply with the Act in February 2017. (Click here to read our 2017 statement). This constitutes the Group’s third transparency statement, and the second following publication of the guidance.

ASSESSMENT OF MODERN SLAVERY RISK
The Board of William Hill remains cognisant of the continuing risks, impacts and costs of global slavery and human trafficking, and fully supports both the original principles of the MSA and the Guidance published in October 2017. William Hill actively maintains a zero tolerance approach to slavery and trafficking in all its forms, in any part of its business or supply chain, continuing to apply the UN Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights and core labour standards set out by the International Labour Organisation.

The Corporate Responsibility Committee of the Board oversees our approach to addressing modern slavery and through our well-established governance and risk frameworks, the Board is kept informed of material developments in this area. The Board has approved this Transparency Statement.

In 2018, we continued to review and assess the risk of modern slavery in our business and supply chain, taking into account the Guidance, and based on this, reaffirm that William Hill, its operations and supply chain remain materially ‘low risk’ in terms of both actual instances of, and the potential for, slavery or trafficking. This assessment is based on: the nature of the Group’s businesses, which are focused on retail and online gambling and gaming products and markets; there having been no significant changes to the nature of the Group’s businesses or operations during the year; the robustness of the Group’s people and supply chain policies; and that the majority of the Group’s operations are based in, and revenues derived from, countries deemed low risk by conventional sustainability indices, including The Global Slavery Index. We also believe that the Group’s business model is unlikely to create material risks of slavery and trafficking where none existed previously. This is because relatively few raw or manufactured materials are employed in the business, and a significant majority of those working within the business are employed directly by the Group, in line with the Group’s employment policies and practices.

We do however recognise that some of the Group’s operations and supply chains extend into countries deemed to present a somewhat higher modern slavery risk level, according to the Global Slavery Index. Relevant Group functions continue to consider appropriate ways in which risk levels arising in, for example, Philippines, Ukraine and Bulgaria, can be assessed and mitigated. No matters of concern have been identified to date.

DUE DILIGENCE AND RISK MANAGEMENT
The Group has continued to pursue the introduction of modern slavery preventative clauses within its standard format supplier agreements, which the Group seeks to utilise for the majority of its material contracts. A new supplier management framework is also being developed to enhance assessment of supplier materiality for risk purposes. The Group has also extended its whistleblowing arrangements to the management and staff of its largest suppliers. These arrangements continue to be monitored by our Audit and Risk Management Committee.

The Group routinely conducts reputational checks, which specifically cover reports of modern slavery, when contracting with new suppliers. Furthermore, prospective suppliers responding to formal tender requests by the Group must confirm their ongoing compliance with all applicable anti-slavery and human trafficking laws, statutes, regulations and codes applicable from time to time.

FUTURE COMMITMENTS
1. To maintain the Group’s zero tolerance approach to modern slavery and human trafficking;
2. To publish progress made against future MSA related objectives annually by reference to key performance indicators;
3. To continue to assess exposure to slavery and trafficking risks across the Group’s supply chain, conducting such supplier due diligence, risk assessments and audit as are proportionate to any risk presented by each part of the business and each supply chain;
4. To enforce, and further strengthen, the Group’s mitigation procedures and policies for modern slavery related risks;
5. To build awareness of modern slavery risk and mitigation measures into the staff training already offered by the Group; and
6. To continue to take appropriate action wherever behaviours or activities not consistent with Group policies are discovered.
